TOLEDO, Sept. 18.—More than half of the 1,700 men, women and children within the Alcazar fortress were believed tonight to have been blown to bits or maimed by the explosion of two mines, each tamped with a ton of TNT.

The two mines were touched off simultaneously giving the impression at first that only one mine had been exploded by the government leaders of the siege against the Fascist citadel.

Two similar mines tonight were set to be exploded at the wish of the government leaders who postponed further action to give occupants of the fortress another chance to evacuate the women and children within.

The terrific blast of the two mines set off today ripped the whole south tower from its base, the massive stone blocks of the fortress plunging into heaps.

Great gaps were blasted in the west and south walls which were the only ones standing after the explosion. A 15-minute artillery bombardment pounded the wreckage of the citadel.

Georgians Preparing Federal Land Bank

Georgia farmers during August gave a concrete dollars and cents testimonial to the benefits of New Deal farm legislation.

For every dollar of their current debt to the Federal Land Bank, they paid $2.38, more than seven times the amount due.

In a few instances, the excess payments were made on past due notes, but the majority were made in advance, showing increased farm income resulting from the general New Deal farm program.

The report was made by E. L. Cooke, state director of the National Emergency Council, on information furnished him by Julian H. Scarborough, president of the Federal Land Bank.

STATE DEMOCRACY FETES ITS VICTORS IN RECENT BALLOT

Leaders of Party Gather at Dinner in Honor of Russell, Rivers, Other
New Deal Supporters.

The United Democracy of Georgia, organized at the polls September 9, paid enthusiastic tribute last night to the true principles of the Democratic party and to its leaders.

More than 1,000 Georgians crowded the roof garden of an Atlanta hotel to hear United States Senator Nathan L. Bachman, of Tennessee, do honor to United States Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., Governor-Designate E. D. Rivers, Clark Howell, national committeeman; Mrs. Virginia Polhill Price, national committeewoman, and to Georgia for its vote of love and confidence to Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

It was the victory dinner of the Democrats who September 9, in the state primary, turned back with a voice of thunder the threat to sell the state to the Republican party. It was the celebration of the victories of Russell, Rivers and Governor Howell, and other critics of the New Deal.

The progress of the nation under the New Deal.

The board of regents of the University System of Georgia yesterday announced purchase for $60,000 of the Nassau hotel, at 160-168 Luckie street, corner of Bartow, to be used to house the University Extension Center, formerly the evening school of Georgia Tech.

The hotel, which adjoins the Baptist Tabernacle, was owned by the executive committee of the Georgia Baptist Convention, represented in the deal by James W. Merritt, executive secretary. The transaction was handled by Draper-Owens Company, realtors, Jesse Draper, president, negotiating the deal.

The property is now being operated as a hotel, with more than 125 rooms.

Ocracoke, N.C., Lighthouse Saves 400 Persons From Death in Hurricane

The 400 residents of Ocracoke Island, N. C., took refuge in the staunch old lighthouse on that tiny sand "bank" 20 miles off the mainland and so escaped death when the West Indies hurricane sent a nine-foot wall of water completely across the island. The famous sea beacon, which has guided ships since 1798, and the lightkeeper's home are shown above. Photo by Miss Marion Hoben, of Atlanta.

ROOSEVELT PAYS HARVARD HOMAGE

F. D. R. Stresses Tolerance, Truth as University Observes Birthday.

Text of Address in Page 3.
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Amid the historic halls and shadowed paths of his alma mater, President Roosevelt paid homage today at Harvard University's 300th anniversary and called for truth, tolerance, self-restraint and "freedom of the human mind" in this day of modern witch-burnings.

In top hat and black topcoat, Mr. Roosevelt sat in a chilling drizzle through two hours of impressive morning ceremonies before the white columns of colonial Appleton chapel.

Rain dripped steadily from the evergreen bedecked platform, from the golden robes of eminent scholars and scientists sprinkled with green, gold, red and blue, and from thousands of Harvard alumni assembled in an open-air theater in the "yard" behind ancient University hall.

Bordering the gathering on every side and hanging limply from standards carved with gilded lions were huge scarlet and white confalons emblazoned with the Latin "veritas"—truth.

Lands Keynote.
In that inscription the President found a keynote for his own mid-afternoon address on the campus where he spent his undergraduate days and, 32 years ago, received his A. B. degree.

In this day of modern witch-burnings, he said, "when freedom of thought has been exiled from many lands where were once its home, it is the part of Harvard and America to stand for the freedom of the human mind and to carry the torch of truth."

"But," he depends on men's tolerance, self-restraint and devotion to freedom, not only for themselves but also for others, whether the truth will prevail through free research, free discussion and the free interchange of civilized men, or will prevail only through suppression and suffering—when none cares whether it prevails or not."

42 Are Drowned as Steamer Sinks; 3 Survive After Six-Hour Struggle

Fishermen Tell Grim Tale of Clinging to Bits of Debris as Storm Vents Fury, and Watching Comrades Lose Grip and Disappear One by One.

LEWES, Del., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Coast guardsmen said tonight they believed 42 men drowned and only three were saved when the fishing steamer Long Island sank off the Delaware coast early today.

All three of the survivors clung to bits of wood for six hours in the open sea.

They were Delmar George, son of the captain, Richard McQuillen, and his brother, Harry, both of Wilmington, N. C.

Among the missing were Captain Ronnie George, skipper of the four-deck vessel; Captain William Bertrand, pilot, an officer in the United States navy during the World War.

The names of the other missing could not be learned here.

Few details of the ship's sinking could be learned from the exhausted survivors. These were sent out over the one telephone line out of Lewes left standing by the hurricane.

They told of a losing fight against a 70-mile-an-hour wind, seas that swept the pilot house, and a final shifting of the cargo that sent the ship to the bottom.

First warning of the disaster that lay ahead came at 6 a. m. Richard McQuillen said as he lay exhausted at the coast guard station at Lewis Beach.

The vessel, bound from Long Island to this port with a cargo of fish, was struck by a huge wave.

The men in the forecastle were hurled from their bunks as water poured across the decks.

For an hour the crew labored at the pumps to clear the holds of water.

Water gained and steam pressure began to give out. Hand pumps were pressed into service, but the water continued to rise.

Then, at 7 a. m., the cargo of fish suddenly shifted under the pounding of wind and sea. The vessel turned over on its side and began to settle.

McQuillen said only one lifeboat could be launched from the slanting decks. But that boat was so heavily

HURRICANE WHIPS OVER LONG ISLAND

75-Mile Gale Lashes Through N. Y. Canyons, Shattering Windows.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—A slashing gale whipped through the steel and stone canyons of New York and across the flatlands of Long Island tonight as the metropolitan area braced itself against the fringe of a tropical hurricane.

Whirling up from the south, a 75-mile-an-hour gale rocked skyscrapers, ripped down awnings, smashed plate glass windows, grounded air traffic, delayed shipping and hurled thunderous waves against the Long Island shore.

Northeast storm warnings were posted from Sandy Hook to New Haven, Conn.

Millions of home-going New Yorkers chased their headgear and tugged with umbrellas in the gusty streets. They were protected from the full force of the blow, however, by the buildings.

High up in the tower of the Empire State building a wind speed indicator swung between 50 and 75 miles an hour. Building officials estimated the lower was swaying three-quarters of an inch off center. Al-lanances were made for a full foot of sway by the builders of both the Empire State and Rockefeller Center towers.

The weather bureau, answering a constant stream of calls, held out hope that the brunt of the hurricane would

Council Ousts Mayor, Successor Drops Dead

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 18.—(AP) The Pensacola city council, in a surprise session tonight, ousted Democratic Mayor H. Clay Armstrong because of his support of the Republican national ticket and named a successor who dropped dead less than an hour after the action.

The new mayor was Will L. Moyer, 70, who succumbed to a heart attack within a short while after he had taken the oath of office.

Officials said Mr. Bear, the only man who voted against replacement of Armstrong, would act as mayor pro tem.

The council held a special surprise session and voted eight to one to replace Armstrong tonight after deadlocking twice in the past six weeks on the question. Moyer was a wholesale grocer and a council member.

Welfare Body Cashier Is Indicted by Jurors

Kennan T. Terrell, cashier of the Fulton County Board of Welfare, was indicted yesterday by the Fulton grand jury on a charge of embezzlement.

The true bill, one of 30 returned by the grand jury in regular session, accused Terrell of obtaining $908 in funds belonging to the welfare board. J. Sid Tiller, chairman of the board, said the loss was fully covered by insurance.

Terrell was appointed to the position of cashier last April and he indicated yesterday by the Fulton grand jury on a charge of embezzlement.

(Copyright, 1936, by Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—A capricious tropical hurricane dipped into coast areas of six states and promised to blow off into the Atlantic ocean tonight with its attendant gales battering New York and the New England coast.

Weather bureau reports placed the center of the storm 100 miles off New Jersey tonight and said the center, with somewhat diminished force, would sweep near Nantucket, Mass., tomorrow morning.

Storm warnings remained displayed north of the Virginia capes to Eastport, Maine, and 60 to 75-mile winds swept over wide areas, disrupting shipping, wrecking communications, and causing reported loss of 44 lives. Fifteen persons were missing.

Winds sometimes attained a velocity of 100 miles an hour beat along the coast from Cape Hatteras, across the Virginia capes, and into Delaware, Maryland and New Jersey today, but meager reports indicated damage and loss of life might be less than in a similar storm in 1933.

42 Drowned as Steamer Sinks

A fishing steamer, the Long Island, went down in Delaware bay at 7 a. m. today, and tonight only three of the 45 men aboard her had reached shore. There was a possibility some of the crew and passengers might have been picked up by some point cut off from communication. Two other men were reported drowned by waves pushed to mountainous height by the roaring winds—one in New Jersey and one in North Carolina.

Two barges occupied by more than 50 negro WPA workers were found aground in the inland waterway four miles below Coinjock after they were feared lost. The barges were torn from their mooring this morning.

A 75-mile-an-hour wind was reported at Fire Island, in Great South bay off Long Island at 8 p. m., eastern standard time, tonight. A heavy rain was heating on Manhattan and a falling barometer indicated the approaching disturbance.

New York Skyscrapers Rocked

Skyscrapers rocked slightly as the wind tore at windows and awnings. Eight men aboard a leaky fishing boat were unreported since they left Cold Springs harbor yesterday. Seven persons were missing in Maryland.

The Ida May Atwater, 400-ton, freighter, was ashore on Delaware breakwater, behind which 18 vessels, warned to cover by the coast guard, huddled in safety.

Cape May (N. J.) coast guards reported an unidentified steamer ashore five miles from the station and two ships and a barge in trouble off shore.

Delaware bay port shipping was paralyzed. Seven persons were reported missing and immense property damage estimated after the hurricane swept the lower Maryland eastern shore. Along the New England coast, shipping observed storm warning flags and hung close to shore.

The steamer Berkshire, carrying 131 school children, anchored off Wing's Neck at the western entrance to Cape Cod and prepared to ride the blow out. The New York-Boston steamer, Boston, cancelled its sailing.

Shipping at Standstill

To the southward, shipping in Norfolk, Hampton Roads and other southern coastal points was at a standstill and the coast guard raced to festal commemorating her 300 years. When the ceremonies had ended, he returned to his special train to head back toward Washington. He had intended to go to his Hyde Park (N. Y.) home but decided to go to the capital to be with Mrs. Roosevelt, confined to the White House with the grippe.

He expected to remain over the weekend, then bring Mrs. Roosevelt with him to Hyde Park Monday to observe another anniversary—the 850th birthday of his mother.

Early in his speech, Mr. Roosevelt prompted laughter and applause as he recalled that when Harvard celebrated her bicentennial 100 years ago, Andrew Jackson was President and many Harvard alumni were "sorely troubled" over the state of the nation. Again a half-century later, under Grover Cleveland, they were perturbed, he said, adding a chuckle that turned into a roar.

"Now, on the 300th anniversary, I am President."

Then, turning later to qualities by which he said the real is distinguished from the nominal school, the President asserted that one of these is an understanding of "philosophies we do not accept and hopes we find it difficult to share."

Officers and alumni brought to a close the festive rites of Harvard's 300th anniversary.

Rain soaked the first few speakers and their 12,000 listeners, including President Franklin D. Roosevelt. A meeting of alumni during the afternoon was transferred to Sande Hall, where, into which 1,000 celebrities crowded while graduates and students heard the addresses over a broadcast system in other college buildings. The gathering then adjourned "until 2036."

Harvard men and visiting educators cheered as President James B. Conant, of Harvard, and President James Rowland Angell, of Yale, voiced demands for the maintenance of intellectual freedom.

Alumni heard President Conant report that benefactions and gifts made to the three hundredth anniversary fund amounted to over $5,000,000, including a gift of $2,000,000 by Lucius N. Littauer, of New York. The money will be devoted, the president said, to scholarships and the extension of the teaching staff.

President Conant, in his tercentenary oration, summoned his hearers to fight against "the waves of anti-intellectualism that is passing round the world."

The gifts which President Conant reported upon during the alumni meeting, held in Harvard's Victorian imitation of an Elizabethan theater while the storm roared outside, included $2,743,972 from 8,851 alumni and friends.

HUNDREDS ARE KILLED BY BLAST AT ALCAZAR

then 1,500 picked government assault guards stormed the debris.

The defenders still alive swung their machine guns in deadly arcs against the government attackers who sought to drive them from their redoubts at bayonet point.

The defenders fell back stubbornly making each pile of wreckage a converted "pillbox."

Their women and children were believed to have taken refuge in the dungeon-like cellars far underground, which apparently had not been crushed by the explosion.

At the entrance to the tunnels leading to the cavern, the male defenders fought off the invaders in a bitter six-hour struggle.

The mines were set off after hours of intense bombardment from two government six-inch guns posted on a sloping hill near the famous citadel.

Most of the city's population had been evacuated to the countryside in the early morning hours. Great crowds gathered to watch the ominous pillars of smoke rise from the powder ruins.

With a rumble and a roar the southwest tower was rent asunder; great chunks of rock hurtled through the air. Tons of debris scattered on the roofs of houses near by, pieces of their shattered roofs clattering into the street.

Two government attackers swarmed up the steep slope in front of the fortress, their rifles blazing away at the insurgents who rushed from shelter to man machine-gun nests.

The detonations of hand grenades roared through the cavernous wreckage down into the pits where women and children huddled together in terror.

The attackers crawled on their bellies from one rock pile to another, laying down a barrage of hand grenades.

Government leaders late in the day viewed renewed resistance as indicated.

They probably had fortified themselves and their womenfolk in the dungeon-like caverns far underground, the government military believed.

Tri-Color on Fort.

Engineers who supervised the laying of the four 100-yard long mines, each containing a ton of TNT, have said that simultaneous percussion of the last two mines would be sufficient to crush the underground redoubts.

One government militiaman managed to plant the government tri-color on one of the remaining walls of the battered fortress.

His comrades, foot by foot, tried to work their way to the mouths of the tunnels leading into the pits.

The areas of Toledo near the Alcazar had been evacuated by the mayor's order, and no civilian casualties were reported after the detonation. As the engineers had predicted, buildings in the neighborhood were not destroyed by the explosion.

Overhead three Fascist pursuit planes sought to strafe the attackers who swarmed over the ruins, but were driven off by government anti-aircraft batteries which had been placed in position for such a development.

BELLIGERENTS AGREE TO MERCY ACCORD

GENEVA, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The League of Red Cross Societies announced that both Spanish belligerents had agreed to a reciprocal basis of evacuation of women and children. The Red Cross headquarters said that information bureau for prisoners of war and civilian prisoners would be opened in Spain.

It also said agreements had been reached with both the Madrid and Burgos high commands to respect the Geneva convention. Under the agreement, it was announced, both sides had pledged themselves to respect the Red Cross symbol.

They also decided not to reply to a note in which the government asked that they resume their posts in the Spanish capital.

REBELS CAPTURE STRATEGIC POSITION

SAINT JEAN DE LUZ, France, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Insurgent Spanish diplomatic dispatches reaching here tonight said, captured the entire city of Orio from Spanish government defenders.

Driving on toward Bilbao, their next major objective, the rebels under General Emilio Mola were said to have advanced as far as Zarautz, a short distance west of Orio.

The Spanish insurgents thus hoped to drive a wedge which would rout the entire northern government army, estimated to include 40,000 fighting men.

NEW DEAL CRITICISM MEANINGLESS--NORRIS

pressed by "unjust and unfair combinations of organized wealth." The danger of dictatorship, said Norris, arises when "those who toil on the farm, in the workshop and in the counting houses, are overburdened and bowed down by injustice at the hands of those who control the property of the nation."

"The re-election of President Roosevelt," the Nebraska emphasized, "is an absolute necessity if we are to save our country from the dangers of Bolshevism and from ultimate dictatorship."

Norris said Governor Landon, thus far, has opposed openly only two New Deal measures—the act imposing heavy taxes on undivided corporation profits and "every form of security bank deposits." Defending the new revenue law as "one of the fairest laws ever enacted," Norris likewise said Governor Landon was entitled to his observation that the measure was "cockeyed" as made in his Buffalo, N. Y., speech in which he promised, "I will defend the act."

"But," Norris added, "I want the people to know whose servant he is and what he intends to do to help his millions of friends who are electing him."

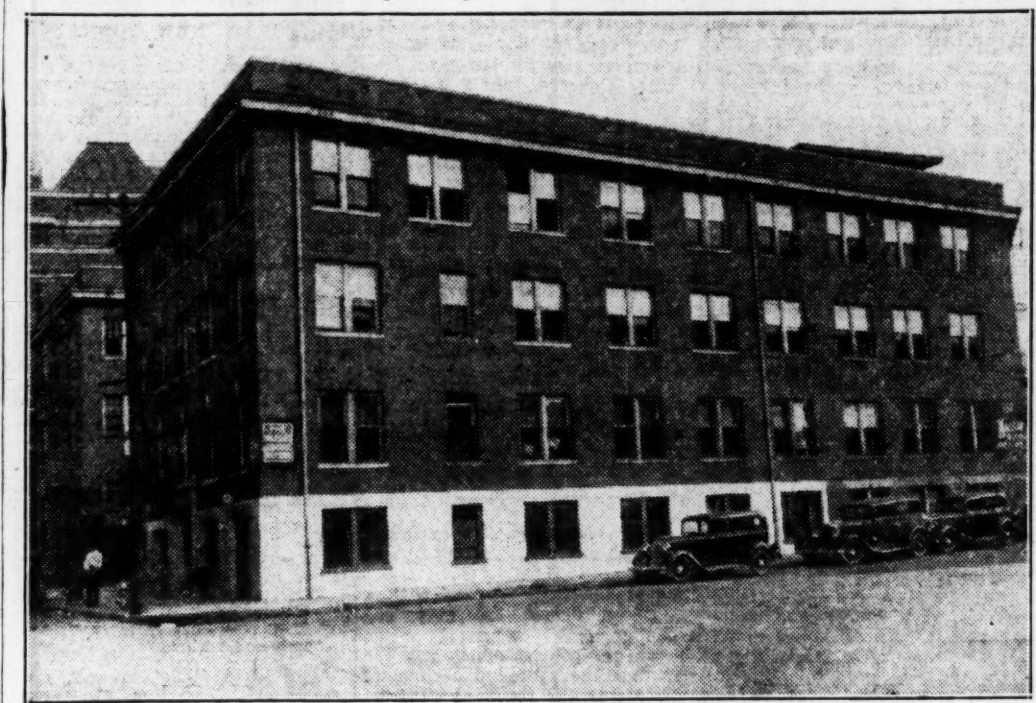

He challenged Governor Landon to express his views on the public utility holding company act of 1935, the rural electrification act, the Farm Credit Administration, expenditures made under PWA in the employment of labor and other New Deal proposals.

"The enemies of President Roosevelt offer no plan of their own," Norris said. "They are not giving their real reasons for opposing the re-election of President Roosevelt. They are merely throwing dust in the eyes of the people. They are trying to save their dividends, the profits they have made and are continuing to make through the economic power they hold."

He expressed confidence that the American people will "not listen to the siren voices of financial ingrates who hate President Roosevelt because he is trying to reform the common man of unjust burdens and cruel treatment thrust upon him by those unconscionable capitalists."

Text of Roosevelt's Address Before Harvard Tercentenary

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The text of the address delivered by President Roosevelt today at Harvard University's tercentenary celebration follows:

I am here today in a joint and several capacity. First, as the president of the United States. Second, as chairman of the United States Harvard tercentenary commission, which is composed of five members of the senate, five members of the house of representatives, a representative of the United States army and one of the navy, and two representatives of the universities of the United States, the distinguished presidents of the Universities of California and North Carolina. Finally, I am here as a son of Harvard who gladly returns to this spot where men have sought truth for 300 years.

The roots of Harvard are deep in the past. It is pleasant to remember today that this meeting is being held in pursuance of an adjournment expressly taken 100 years ago on motion of Josiah Quincy.

HARVARD ALUMNI SORELY TROUBLED

At that time many of the alumni of Harvard were sorely troubled concerning the state of the nation. Andrew Jackson was president. On the 25th anniversary of the founding of Harvard College, alumni again were sorely troubled. Grover Cleveland was president. Now, on the 300th anniversary, I am president.

In the words of Euripides:

"There be many shapes of mystery. And many things God makes to be, Past hope or fear."

And the end men looked for cometh not.

And a path is there where no man sought.

So hath it fallen here."

In spite of years Harvard and the nation of which it is a part have marched steadily to new and successful achievements, changing their formations and their strategy to meet new conditions; but marching always under the old banner of freedom.

In the old days of New England it was Increase Smith who told the students of Harvard that they were "pledged to the word of no particular master," that they should "above all find a friend in truth."

That became the creed of Harvard. Behind the tumult and the shouting it is still the creed of Harvard.

FREEDOM OF MIND, TORCH OF TRUTH

In this day of modern witch-burning, when freedom of thought has been exiled from many lands which were once its home, it is the part of Harvard and America to stand for the freedom of the human mind and to carry the torch of truth.

The truth is great and will prevail. For centuries that grand old saying has been a rock of support for persecuted men.

But it depends on men's tolerance, self-restraint and devotion to freedom, not only for themselves but also for others, whether the truth will prevail through free research, free discussion and the free intercourse of civilized men, or will prevail only after suppression and suffering when none cares whether it prevails or not.

Love of liberty and freedom of thought is a most admirable attribute of Harvard. But it is not an exclusive possession of Harvard or of any other university in America. Love of liberty and freedom of thought are as profound in the homes, on the farms and in the factories of this country as in any university. Liberty is the air Americans breathe. Our government is based on the belief that a people can be both strong and free; that civilized men need no restraint against abuse of freedom. Nevertheless it is the peculiar task of Harvard and every other university and college in this country to foster and maintain not only freedom within its own walls but also tolerance, self-restraint, fair dealing and devotion to the truth throughout America.

STUDENTS RENDER GREAT SERVICE

Many student who have come to Harvard in the past have left it with inquiring and open minds, ready to render service to the nation. They have been given much and from them much has been expected. They have rendered great service.

It is, I am confident, of the innermost of Harvard that its sons have fully participated in each great drama of our nation's history. They have met the challenge of the revolution, they have seen in the challenge opportunity to fulfill the end the university expects to serve. As the chief executive of the nation, being the solicitation of our people. In the name of the American nation I venture to ask you to cherish its traditions and to fulfill its highest opportunities.

The nation needs from Harvard today men like Charles William Elliot, William James and Justice Holmes, who made their minds swords in the service of American freedom.

They served America with courage, wisdom and human understanding. They were without hatred, malice or selfishness. They were civilized gentlemen.

TOLERANCE, PEACE STRESSED BY F. D. R.

The past of Harvard has been deeply distinguished. This university will never fail to produce its due proportion of those judged successful by the common standard of success. Of such the world has need. But to produce that type is not, I am sure, the ultimate justification that you would make for Harvard. Rather do we here search for the atmosphere in which are produced those who have either the rare quality of vision or the ability to appreciate the significance of vision when it appears. Where there is vision, there is tolerance; and where there is tolerance, there is peace. And I beg you to think of tolerance and peace not as indifferent and neutral virtues but as active and positive principles.

I am not, you will observe, conceiving of the university as a mere spectator of the great national and international drama in which all of us, despite ourselves, are involved. Here are to be trained not lawyers and doctors merely, not teachers and businessmen merely; here is to be trained in the fullest sense—man.

Harvard should train men to be citizens in that high Athenian sense which compels a man to live his life unceasingly aware that his civic significance is its most abiding, and that the rich individual diversity of the truly civilized state is born only of the wisdom to choose ways to achieve which do not hurt one's neighbors.

PERPETUATION ASKED OF HARVARD STUDENTS

I am asking the sons of Harvard to dedicate themselves not only to the perpetuation, but also to the enlargement of that spirit. To pay ardent reverence to the past but to recognize no less the direction of the future; to understand philosophies we do not accept and hopes we find it difficult to share; to account the service of mankind to the highest ambition a man can follow, and to know that there is no calling so humble that it cannot be instinct with that ambition; never to be indifferent to what may affect our neighbors; always as Coleridge said, to put truth in the first place and not in the second; these I would affirm are the qualities by which the "real" is distinguished from the "nominal" scholar.

It is only when we have attained this philosophy that we can "above all find a friend in truth." When America is dedicated to that end by the common will of all her citizens, then America can accomplish her highest ideals. To the measure that Harvard participates in that dedication, Harvard will be justified of its effort, her purpose, and her success in the fourth century of her life.

REGENTS PURCHASE NEW SITE FOR SCHOOL

It is a three-story and basement brick structure, with two wings, and with 55,000 square feet of floor space. The regents are to take possession not later than December 1.

Remodeling Cost.

It is estimated by an official of the University System that it will require approximately $30,000 to remodel the building to make it suitable for school purposes. This amount the regents hope to obtain from the WPA. At present there is a lien against the hotel, property held by the Hibernia National bank, at New Orleans. The executive committee of the Baptist convention agreed, however, to settle the lien and deliver the property free of debt to the regents.

A number of years ago, the Georgia Baptist hospital was housed in the structure, but there a Nassau hotel has occupied it and operated there for about 13 years.

Under agreement with the Baptist officers, the extension school is given the privilege of using the huge Baptist Tabernacle auditorium for any purpose desired.

Present Location.

The Extension Center now is housed in a building at 223 Walton street, owned by the University System, and in which is also the office of the Department of Adult Education. No future plans for the use of the Walton street property were made at the meeting of the regents yesterday.

At present, more than 1,400 pupils are enrolled in the University Extension Center. Last year it had an enrollment of 1,275 pupils. It maintains both an afternoon college and evening classes, the hours being from 2 to 5 p. m. and from 6 to 10 p. m. It has 45 faculty members. While it is frequently referred to as the Evening School of Georgia Tech, in reality it is not a part of the Tech system, but is a general part of the University System of Georgia.

Purchase Long Considered.

Consideration of the purchase of the property has been before committees of the board of regents several months. After a special committee had made a report on the property, another committee composed of Chairman Sandy Beaver, Chancellor S. V. Sanford and Regent Miller S. Bell, of Milledgeville, made a more thorough investigation and recommended to the board yesterday that the property be purchased.

OUTDOING THE BLACK AGES

Not in centuries has the world witnessed so inhuman, savage and barbarous a purpose as the deliberate effort of the Spanish Loyalists to blow up the Alcazar fortress at Toledo, with its 1,700 defenders, men, women and children.

No wonder that the world stands aghast at a deed so heinous and monstrous in its violation of every tenet of modern civilization.

Not even the brutalities and the fiendish tortures of the Dark Ages are a blacker blot in the record of man's inhumanity to man. That in this civilized time a mass murder of 1,700 persons should be deliberately planned and coldheartedly carried out is beyond human comprehension.

Apparently without the thought of mercy, the so-called Loyalists went about the business of digging tunnels under the Alcazar, in which the revolutionists had maintained a desperate and successful defense. When these tunnels had been completed to a point beneath the fortress, they were filled with tons of dynamite.

Then the defenders were told that they must surrender or else be blown to atoms—and in the case of surrender the men were to die, with the women and children being promised safety. The refusal of these brave Spanish women to desert their husbands, fathers and brothers in the face of certain death will go down in history as an inspiring and thrilling chapter of unselfish and devoted heroism.

When the first detonation seemed to have obliterated the entire group within the walls of the Alcazar, the two other mines were set off, and most of these brave men and women who had been barricaded within it for several weeks seem to have gone to their deaths under the crashing walls of the old fortress. The Loyalists, their blood lust not satisfied by even this gruesome slaughter, swarmed into the ruins to wipe out the pitiful remainder.

The atrocity reveals what the world can expect when government falls into the hands of a rabble like that supporting the so-called Loyalist regime of Spain. Anarchists, Communists, Socialists and the riff-raff of civilization have been banded together and the result has been the murder of hostages, innocent of any crimes against country or government; the burning and crucifying of priests and nuns whose lives had been dedicated to the well-being of mankind; the desecration of churches, and the wholesale destruction of property, both private and public.

On top of this black record of several weeks, comes the blowing up of the Alcazar with its pitiful victims—men, women and children—who knew that, even if they surrendered, death or worse awaited them.

This last atrocity will lose to the Loyalist government whatever sympathy it may have had from the civilized nations of the world. To condone such a ghastly crime against decency and humanity would be to wear the veneer of civilization perilously thin.

FOR LITTLE LIVES AND LIMBS

There should be a large attendance upon the meeting this morning at the Fulton High school of representatives of all schools of the city and county systems for the purpose of lessening the danger to the school children of the city from traffic accidents.

Even with the utmost precautions, little lives and limbs are in constant danger every morning and afternoon as the thousands of school children go to and return from school each day. On the day of the opening of the fall term, a little six-year-old suddenly darted from the line of march of a group of his schoolmates—and was suddenly in the path of an on-coming automobile. Not a day has passed since in which some other youngster has not been hurt or has had narrow escape from serious injury.

The officers assigned to the various schools are performing fine work in protecting the children, but they are few in number and can guard the crossings only near the schools. The wonder is that, with the streets filled with thousands of children twice each day, and with traffic in the same hours unusually heavy with thousands of automobilists on their way in the morning to work or returning to their offices after the lunch hour, more children are not injured.

If these little lives and limbs are to be safeguarded to the greatest possible extent, the children themselves must have stressed upon them the danger of lack of care in crossing streets, the automobilists of the city must come to a greater realization of the necessity for slow and careful driving during the hours that the youngsters are going to and from school, and the traffic officers must exert redoubled efforts toward bringing greater safety to the public thoroughfares.

Several plans to minimize the risk to the youngsters will be advanced at this morning's meeting. They should be studied carefully and utilized in every way possible.

BLUM'S REPLY TO HITLER

The address of Premier Blum, of France, to the recent utterances of Dictator Hitler extolling the virtues of dictatorial government, constitutes the most powerful and convincing defense of democratic government since the mushroom growth of dictatorships in Europe started with the seizure of power in Russia by the Soviet dictators more than a decade and a half ago.

Holding that the world's democracies during the past century have shown as much stability as dictatorships, even when the dictator was a "genius," Premier Blum emphasizes that it was "thanks to democracy that the United States was able to carry out in several years a prodigious economic restoration without compromising legal order for one instant."

The world-wide depression has provided the great test of governmental structures in the past century, and it is significant that the two great nations where the people are the rulers in fact—the United States and Great Britain—have met the test with less loss of stability and less suffering than in any of the nations having dictatorial or monarchical types of government.

Even in Italy, where under the able direction of Mussolini dictatorship has functioned most perfectly, regimentation of industry and business to the point of practical confiscation has taken place, and freedom of speech and action has been lost to the people. In every nation with a dictatorial government the prisons have overflowed with political offenders, and the firing squads have been more or less continuously busy.

Hitler's bombastic statement that "it's all the same to us whether democracies hate Nazi Germany or not," is not the utterance of a man confident in the permanence of the form of government which he defends. Rather, it is an effort to defend a condition of servitude and loss of independence that has been thrust upon a great people that he knows cannot stand the test of time.

Strange it is that there are those in America who, in the face of such unanswerable arguments as those of Premier Blum, are willing to listen to the proponents of Bolshevism, Fascism, Nazism and the other radical and destructive isms of Europe, when the actual record shows that there is more stability of government, more freedom of speech and action and less human suffering under our democratic form of government.

It is revealed that 66 in America own automobiles for every car owner in Italy. Yet we have no dictator, urging us to live dangerously.

The auto accident situation has reached the point that it is high time the public put its foot down on the brake.

Hyeres, France

—Health Resort—

HYERES, France, Sept. 18.—Hyerès, once one of the most popular of the Riviera resorts, is now regaining its old reputation, and sharing with its sister cities, Cannes, Nice, Monte Carlo and other resorts along the coast the crowds which come each winter to the Côte d'Azur.

For many years, however, it remained in comparative obscurity, for it was so unfortunate as to gain a name as a health resort and consequently the pleasure seekers of America and Europe passed it by, considering it a place only for invalids. Most famous of those who sought healing health was Robert Louis Stevenson, who was staying in the city in 1883 when "Treasure Island" was first published. It was here that he wrote some of his "Child's Garden of Verses," and in spite of the fact that while here he was so troubled with sciatica that he had to write with his left hand, he once said, "I was only happy once and that was at Hyeres."

The old town of Hyeres clings to the side of a hill, content within its walls. The new town, on the other hand, reveals at once its kinship with other Riviera cities, for its streets are lined with palm trees and the whole town presents the subtropical atmosphere of the Riviera. The section about it is a region of cork and mulberry trees, which flourish in the mountains of the Maures, with excursions either back into the hills or to the coast to other Riviera cities, or out into the Mediterranean to the Lles d'Or.

In the Maures one finds the forests of cork for which this part of France is famous. The trees themselves grow 30 to 50 feet high and shed their bark naturally every eight years. For commercial purposes, the bark is not taken from young trees until they are about 20 years old, and it may be removed periodically for as long as 150 years, the cork improving in quality the older the tree gets.

Talmudic Tales

BY DAVID MORANTZ.

(From time to time Mr. Morantz will appear in this column with tales which have been asked on the religion, customs, legends, institutions, etc., of the Jews.)

By what other names is the Jewish New Year known?

Rosh Hashana; Day of the Sounding of the Shofar; Day of Judgment; Day of Memorial.

What is the meaning of the words "Rosh Hashana"?

"Head of the year," or beginning of the year, and is the name applied to the Jewish New Year.

What happens that the Jewish New Year occurs on the first of the seventh month instead of the first month?

Jewish year commences with the seventh month, Tishri. On the first day of that month falls Rosh Hashana, the solemn day of judgment to which the additional name of New Year's Day is given. The creation is indicated by tradition to have taken place on that day; and the creation is theoretically the starting point of Jewish chronology.

The year thus begins with the month of Tishri. But Tishri is still regarded as the seventh month, conforming with Exodus XIII:2 which commands the Israelite to consider Nissan, the month of the great Exodus from Egypt, as the first of the months. Hence, in the list of the months, Nissan stands first.

What is the meaning of "Tashlich"?

It is a ceremony based upon the passage from Micah, VII:18-20: "He will again have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities; and Thou wilt cast (Hebrew, "V'tashlich") all their sins into the depths of the sea." If the first day of Rosh Hashana does not fall on a Sabbath, the ceremony is performed the afternoon of that day along the banks of a stream or seashore and repeated prayers and verses from the prophets.

M. Friedlander in "The Jewish Religion," says the basis of this ceremony is "to reflect on the purifying effect of water on the soul, and to be reminded that even as the body is purified by water, so ought our souls be purified by repentance and the appeal to the help and mercy of God."

Why is a piece of sweet apple dipped in honey on the eve of Rosh Hashana?

Sometimes a piece of bread instead of apple is dipped in honey on that occasion and the person dipping either the apple or bread says, "May it be as sweet as honey." It is a good omen, and the events of the new year be pleasant and favorable just as the sweet apple or bread are pleasant to the taste.

HUMAN KINDNESS.

It was the hour when the evening trains are leaving for Florida from the Terminal station. The long, sweeping lines of mail and express and sleeping cars faded into the mists of smoke and darkness about the shed. People hurried to their places. The engines thrived with power.

A group of men had gathered in the smoking room of a sleeping car. None of us had met before. There was talk of this and that cursory subject. A man in a suit and tie, who had been on the platform, stepped slowly down the car and, having reached the smoking room, he accepted the choice seat. The conversation was resumed.

"Ah," he was nervously fumbling through his pockets. His face was excited. What was it? He had laid his purse down on the seat of the taxi or at the ticket window or at the table where the sleeping ticket was checked—somewhere he had laid his purse down! It was exactly one minute until leaving time.

"Stay right here," said one of our number. "Don't worry, we'll have that purse before this train moves. Just don't worry."

JOB SHIFT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—President Roosevelt is understood to have devoted some thought lately to getting his defeated Republican friend, Senator Couzens, into a big New Deal job.

Casual consideration, at least, is known to have been given by some of Couzens' friends toward boosting the straight-shooting Michiganard with $30,000,000 and a will of his own into the treasury secretaryship. This is the job he would fit best, but it is, of course, now amply occupied.

Mr. Morgenthau, who holds it, is known to be inclined to keep on holding it. He would be moved only by a request from his friend and boss.

If invited to take anything else, he would choose the Paris ambassadorship, but that, too, he has been offered. The State Department earnestly denies rumors that the Bullitt appointment to Paris was merely a temporary arrangement to meet the present peculiar French situation.

If the wheels which are moving in these directions slip the track, Couzens might be offered the budget directorship. Acting Budget Director Bell will probably be moved into the 15-year job of comptroller general sooner or later.

Mr. Couzens is highly regarded inside New Deal circles for his independence. He was in the wrong pond in the senate. His nature and experience being better suited to executive activities. The New Dealers seem to think his appointment to any big post would be a political tenet-strike for Mr. Roosevelt.

GETTING READY

The official denial that creation of a European naval squadron means anything was entirely of the diplomatic variety.

Ten days ago, Mr. Roosevelt scoffed at the suggestion of such a move. A week ago, Navy Secretary Swanson denied the navy had thought of it. Three days ago, it was done.

What happened in the meantime to change official minds was the war threat by Hitler against the Russians and the profound excitement it caused in Moscow. Officials here considered the resultant situation far more serious than the public at large. They thought there was a distinct possibility of a clash between Russia and Germany, not immediately, perhaps, but within the near future.

Thus the new European naval squadron was created with a view to the possibility that it might have to remove American nationals some time soon from trouble zones other than those in Spain. At the same time, authorities here wisely wanted to avoid starting a war scare, so they advertised it as a routine move.

EFFICIENCY

In a secondary way, it was one, and a good one. What it will do technically is to permit the new admiral to move his ships in European waters swiftly. He will not have to go through all the rigamaroom of getting orders from Washington every time a coast guard cutter wants to turn around. Also, he will furnish central control on the job to keep the ships out of such trouble as the destroyer Kane unfortunately encountered from the presumably mysterious air.

Note—The squadron creation was an inside victory for commissioned officers of the navy. They have been pulling for a European squadron for a long time. It affords them new cruising waters and what they call "new social education" in European ports.

TONAL QUALITY

Mr. Roosevelt has been in good humor lately. His banter with newsmen at press conferences has revealed his personal attitude better than it has been expressed otherwise. Excerpts from the last one can be paraphrased in the proper tone, something like this:

Campaign plans? Well, to be frank, he wants to make a trip to the Pacific coast. He has gone as far as arranging a schedule to find out how many days it would take out and back, but he doesn't know. He will do it if he can. He doesn't want to start a war scare, but the way from Washington longer than four days in a row. What the situation will be 10 days hence, he doesn't know. Sea trip in December to Pan American conference? No, but he will tell you what he probably will do after November 3. Take a sea trip of 10 days or two weeks for fishing in some of those spots he overlooked previously in the Gulf of Mexico.

Will the President do that regardless of what happens November 3? No, except that he is a damned good guesser. He is such a good political guesser, he may syndicate himself after election. He doesn't want to brag, but he thinks he is pretty good. In the five Maine counties, his estimates were very close on three, off a little on one and away off on another, a congressional contest.

That reminds him about Albany, 1932. Some of the political experts got up a pool on the election and he thinks everybody put $5 in the hat, and "mind they were all experts," but he won the pool.

Any comment about Lloyds offering 5 to 3 on his election? (Pause and then a response in an amazed tone of voice.) Lloyds did that! (An assurance came from the crowd that it was true.) Well. (Another pause.) Probably any answer to that would be construed as a bid for British support. (Laughter. Exeunt.)

Lady of leisure,
What do you do?
How do you squander
The hours away?
It must be tragic
To idle, like you,
Foolish, boring,
Useless day.

Sometimes Life Goes Hokus.

He committed a crime. A rebellion violation of one of society's basic laws. He was caught, tried and sentenced to a long term in prison.

He was assigned to a county camp and put to work with the gang working on the county roads.

And his rebellion grew. The warden and guards soon learned to classify him as a bad actor and he was closely watched and heavily shackled. He knew the stocks and other forms of punishment for unruly convicts and, with each incident, each defiance of discipline, his rebellion increased.

With a year he was all afraid of him, the guards and his fellow convicts, too. He was avoided, both while at work and during the leisure hours, and at night he slept on a cot separated from those of his companions in punishment.

Young, his face became sullen and his temper was always hot. He was the very embodiment of a rebel. He never spoke except to curse and he was sure, in his own mind, he was the most ill-treated and abused of all men.

The Youth's Background.

The truth was, if someone had only known, he had lost touch with the softer and more decent side of life years before he was committed to the prison for which he was sent to prison. For years he had made his own way in the world, making a living on the streets and he began to grow and strata of humanity which takes pride in toughness and lives by its wits, not having wit enough to recognize such livelihood must always be the poorest of the poor.

The Turning Point.

One hot afternoon the gang, of which he was one, was working on a highway not far from Atlanta. As usual, this outlaw was left to himself as much as possible. None of his fellows was near him and the guard, who kept a special eye and gun on him, was half asleep with the heat of the late afternoon.

A little girl, not more than 4 years old, came from a house on the road and, aimlessly wandering along, came close to the lone convict. She sat on a bank, near him, with her doll in her lap. And so, the wheels of fate turned. Then her desire for human friendship broke out and she spoke to the sullen man, laboring with pick and shovel.

She asked him his opinion on the beauty of her doll.

At first he didn't answer and she persisted. He began to cry, softly. "You're a bad, mean old man," she said.

The convict looked up and, for the first time in many months, grinned. "Oh, maybe, little sister," he said. "Why is you bad?" she asked.

"Mr. mother says bad mens ain't happy," said the little girl.

And a Little Child—

From that point the conversation between the bitter, hard convict and

FAIR ENOUGH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Name Substituted.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—Just for effect I am going to substitute another name for that of Lawrence Simpson, the native American sailor, who has been locked up in a German prison for a year and three months awaiting trial charged with the possession of seditious documents in his private locker aboard an American ship. I shall imagine, for the moment, that the prisoner is Vincent Astor, the rich and powerful friend of Mr. Roosevelt who has often entertained the President aboard his yacht, Nourmahal, on vacation cruises.

We are assuming that the millionaire friend of the President was off on a cruise in the Nourmahal and put into Cuxhaven, Germany, where Simpson was arrested, to buy some caviar and duck and other stores for his boat. While the ship lay in Cuxhaven, a Nazi agent came aboard, went through Mr. Astor's private quarters, opened his safe and discovered a personal letter from a friend in the United States, which said, in part: "Our American Democracy is much superior to the Nazi theory and Hitler is, to my mind, a madman."

The Nazi agent, who was clearly a seditious, took Mr. Astor ashore, locked him up and refused to let him communicate with anyone.

Word of Arrest

However, word of the arrest leaked out.

The United States and caused a great commotion in Washington. The President called up Mr. Hull, the secretary of state, in the middle of the night, and Mr. Hull immediately got into the transatlantic phone to Berlin to stir up the ambassador. There was no need for that, however, because the ambassador already had been at work for hours, dealing direct with the foreign office, and the unfriendly incident was rapidly approaching a happy solution. Mr. Astor had been released from the damp cell and was enjoying the status of a decorated guest, so to speak, in the private quarters of the governor of the prison. Members of his yachting party had come ashore to visit him and the United States consul was tearing the town apart in a laudable desire to relieve the embarrassment of an eminent American victim of a deplorable error.

Within a day, Mr. Astor had been released with the regrets and best wishes of the Nazi authorities and was inclined to treat the whole affair as an amusing experience. The official word that the arrest had been dispensed for stupid blunders, the prestige of the American passport had been upheld and the rights of American citizens in foreign ports had been stoutly upheld by the United States Department of State.

Held Identical That, however, was Vincent Astor, the millionaire friend and host of the President and not a common forecable hand on an American ship.

The forecable hand, Lawrence Simpson, possessed an American passport exactly the same as any other and the same laws were supposed to cover his case but he was tossed into prison where he has been held for 15 months. His health declined, his hair turned white and the American state department refused to give him any protection on the ground that the case was not a diplomatic but a common law matter. He could wait. His time was worth only $40 a month, anyway.

Simpson's case finally attracted the attention of a young man named Gifford A. Cochran, a Yale graduate of the class of '29 whose family name was famous on the sport pages of this country a few years ago when his father owned Flying Ebony, the Derby winner, and Coventry, the winner of the Preakness, in 1926.

It is odd to discover a scion of one of the famous American fortunes fighting for the freedom and American rights of an obscure sailor. The cause the prominent young scion is mostly to be found in stylish saloons or gambling houses. If Mr. Cochran had been an orthodox scion you probably would be seeing occasional pictures of him proudly holding the bridle of a rose-garlanded race horse and accepting a cup from the hands of some politician at the conclusion of a big horse race.

Different Kind However Mr. Cochran is a scion of a different sort of a and last July he went to Berlin at his own expense on his own initiative to investigate the case of Lawrence Simpson, who was not Vincent Astor, but a young man of many millions and no personal friend of Mr. Roosevelt. Before leaving for Berlin, Mr. Cochran visited the state department with the old father of the sailor, who wept when the under-secretary of the department, Mr. James C. McLaughlin, inquired of him: "Well, what do you want us to do? Send a battleship over for your boy?"

In Berlin, Mr. Cochran finally was allowed to see Lawrence Simpson, not Vincent Astor, in the presence of the Nazi jailers, but was not permitted to inquire into the details of the case, to see the prisoner or to discuss the charges. He could only offer to help, and Simpson, suspicious of everyone, now was afraid to sign a power of attorney for him.

So Lawrence Simpson, a poor man, an American sailor, born in Illinois, not Vincent Astor, the millionaire, friend and host of President Roosevelt, may be sure, still lies in prison in Germany, sick, worried, abandoned by his government, ignored by his friends, and his future Mrs. Fondle not stoop to the problems of poor Americans, awaiting trial before a Nazi court where his defense will be in the hands of a Nazi lawyer who is required by Nazi law to be a member of the gang.

DEMOCRACY HONORS VICTORS IN ELECTION

the leadership of President Roosevelt was forcefully stressed by United States Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, who pointed out that among the many humanitarian things accomplished by the New Deal, not the least important was the progress made in neutrality legislation and the taking of profits from war.

Senator George declared the United States is better prepared to resist war and to defend itself from any emergency than ever before in its history.

President Roosevelt himself sent the following telegram to Alton Coggins, chairman of the Democratic victory dinner: "I send hearty greetings to the guests of honor and to all who are participating in the dinner tonight, and I trust it will be an outstanding success in keeping with the best Georgia traditions."

Chairman Coggins acted as master of ceremonies and introduced from the floor the Georgia party leaders.

November Election. Speakers proclaimed that the result of the Georgia primary victories of Russell and Rivers over New Deal critics presaged the vote of the nation in the November general elections.

Remarkable was the enthusiasm of the Democrats who gathered at the victory dinner. They filled the hall to overflowing and nearly 400 were seated in another room. Many had to be turned away.

Senator Bachman, who was formerly chief justice of the Tennessee supreme court, paid tribute to Governor-elect Howell and said there was "no finer man in the senate than Dick Russell."

"Georgia has done herself proud in nominating Senator Russell and Governor-elect Rivers, and has broadcast to the world and to the warlords, the money changers, and those who sit around the fleshpots that the state of Georgia is not for sale and can not be bought," the Tennessee senator asserted. Senator Bachman was introduced by Abit Nix, of Athens, a former candidate for governor.

Howell Presents George. Mr. Howell introduced Senator George. In the course of his remarks he predicted that Georgia has seen the last of the rule by military and the last of the would-be Hitlers and Mussolinis. "No more reconstruction days for Georgia," he said. "We have demonstrated that bayonets will never be used at the polls again, for we have returned them into the hands of Democracy for a constitutional government."

George's Comments. In his speech, Senator George struck out at critics of the President. "There are those who say Franklin D. Roosevelt is not a Democrat. I stand here to tell you he is a Democrat. He is the greatest Democrat of modern times. He is holding this nation of ours together against the threats of dictatorships that we have in foreign lands."

"Your victory in Georgia is but a forecast for the country in the November election for our party's ticket. If Roosevelt is defeated it will mean chaos in this nation."

"Don't let them tell you our coun-

Outstanding Figures at Victory Dinner Celebrating Georgia Democracy's Recent Triumph at State Polls

Senator Nathan L. Bachman, of Tennessee, and Senator Richard B. Russell Jr., his close personal friend, shown last night as Georgia Democrats celebrated the recent primary victory. Senator Bachman was one of the principal speakers.

try is not prepared to defend her foreign policies, which may become all important during the next two years with countries on the continent of Europe seething with bloodshed and discontent.

Not a Pacifist. "This nation of ours is better prepared tonight than at any time since the end of the World War. I tell you this and I am not a pacifist. We are prepared. And that is the surest guarantee that we will remain out of the struggles now flaming in Europe."

Senator Russell said he "realized that this is no personal victory of mine, but a victory of the Democracy of Georgia that has shown its faith in Franklin Delano Roosevelt is firm and unshaken."

"You, the leaders of this Democracy in Georgia, have demonstrated that never can anyone lead our state into the ranks of the Republicans."

Both Senator Russell and Governor-elect Rivers made brief speeches, each assuring Georgians they were proud to have carried the banner of Democracy in the campaign wars.

They made pleas for the people to give President Roosevelt a further indication of their confidence by turning out an overwhelming vote in the general election November 3. Rivers called for a "great convention" at Macon and urged Georgians to attend. He said James Farley, postmaster general, had been invited to speak. A parade of Democrats will be staged.

Marion H. Allen, of Milledgeville, introduced Senator Russell, while Rivers was introduced by Charles S. Reid, Atlanta lawyer, who has been named the next permanent chairman of the state executive committee.

Rivers paid tribute to Mr. Howell and other leaders of the party as urged Georgians to make the Macon convention the greatest of all. He asked the co-operation of all state officials in carrying out the mandate of the people to provide old age pensions and free school books and declared himself pleased that those running on similar platforms for most state offices and for the general assembly had been elected. "The state and national delegations will be able to work harmoniously together for the good of Georgia," he said.

Justice Swiftly Dealt To Burglary Suspects

Two persons indicted by the grand jury yesterday entered pleas of guilty to burglary charges in Fulton superior court a few hours later and were sentenced. They were L. P. Houston and James Burke, who received terms of 2 to 3 years and 12 months, respectively. Goods stolen by them were valued at $1,600.

Harry Trout, white, was named in a true bill charging theft of a car owned by Fulton county. Charles Bryant, Mack Kirkland and Elmer Ramsauer were named in several bills for robbery and auto theft.

Governor Landon's Address To Republican Youth Meet

TOPEKA, Kas., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The following is the text of Governor Alf M. Landon's address before the National Conference of Young Republicans.

Mr. Bradley, ladies and gentlemen: It is gratifying to me to get your most encouraging message. You represent young men and women throughout the nation, young men and women many of whom have the responsibility this year of casting their first vote.

This nation has always taken pride in its young voters. It has taken pride in the fact that our first voters have been young men and women. They are the backbone of our nation's future.

There has been a real reason for this pride. Our first voters are not content with the past. They have their eyes on the future. They have the courage and the ambition to go on and build a better America. They are more than any other group in our nation, assure progress.

History and experience teach that America is made over in every generation. It is made over, not by wishful thinking; it is made over, not from blue prints in Washington; it is made over by the high hopes and the honest toil of the American people.

KIND OF GOVERNMENT IS THE ISSUE OF TODAY

Your presence here today is proof that you are following in the footsteps of the generations of youth that have built America. It is proof that the youth of this land is not willing to surrender liberty or a phantom security, welcome you to the comradeship of a great cause. This is no ordinary campaign in which we are engaged. It is not a campaign based upon the usual partisan issues. It is a campaign that cuts across all party lines. Today the issue is the kind of government, and the kind of country, we are to have in the years to come.

In the past, for the most part, our campaigns have dealt chiefly with how the government should exercise the powers it has. This is also an issue in this campaign, and a very important one. But now, in addition, we are faced by a far greater issue. This is, what powers the government shall have and what powers it shall not have.

The question raised by this issue—what powers the government shall have and what powers it shall not have—can be the difference between representative government and organized authority wielded by one man.

Once that is clearly understood by the voters of this country, I have no doubt as to the results. I know that in the minds of some people, this issue is not drawn as sharply as it should be, and that other factors confuse the issue.

IT IS MIGHTY HARD TO MAINTAIN COURAGE

We see for example, the horrible suffering and distress of continued unemployment. We see people who have lost their life savings through no fault of their own. We see factories idle and fields uncultivated when millions of our fellow citizens are in need of food and clothing. And we see others apparently able to ride through the storm without personal sacrifice and without personal hardship.

It is mighty hard for anybody to maintain courage and confidence in the face of such conditions, and this should be borne in mind by every employer. It is especially hard for our young people who are trying to get a start. As they look around they find an economic system that seems to have broken down. Regardless of their training and skill, many have found it impossible to get a job. Many have been forced into the ranks of the unemployed—forced either to remain dependent upon their families, or to seek aid on the relief rolls.

To me, these young people are among the saddest victims of the depression. In my own mind they have a place apart. For the others have had jobs and one might say, they have known what it means to earn their own way. To them the depression has meant hardship and suffering. I know. But to our young people who never have been able to find employment, the depression has meant more than this. It has robbed them of the opportunity they had dreamed of for years—the opportunity to be self-supporting, to be independent, to stand on their own feet.

MAINTAIN FAITH IN HUMAN LIBERTY

For these young people it is not sufficient merely to provide food and clothing. We must do more. We must convince them that our form of government has not failed. We must prove to them that our economic system still is capable of giving them work at full pay. We must convince them that the business system still is capable of giving them the opportunity to be self-supporting, to be independent, to stand on their own feet.

To those whose faith has not wavered, this may not appear such a difficult task. But let us not deceive ourselves. The other side presents very alluring arguments. It is said, for example, that we have come to the end of an era—that our "industrial plant is complete"—that henceforth we must live in the shadow of the machine. To those who have little thought to our history this may sound like good reasoning. But it is not good reasoning. It is a reasoning based upon seven years of bad times instead of upon 150 years of progress. Of course we no longer have a geographical frontier. But we have a frontier that is far more important from the point of view of the youth of this country. That is the frontier of new inventions. That was the frontier developed by the automobile industry. And that industry alone has absorbed many times as many people as ever moved across a geographical frontier during a depression.

BUSINESS UNABLE TO CARRY ON

Another argument is used by those who are trying to make youth believe they have no future under the American system. They say American businessmen are no longer capable of making those decisions which will assure the maximum good for the greatest number. They would have the government make these decisions to an increasing extent.

His argument, let me warn you, is far more dangerous—far more insidious, than the contention that we have come to the end of an era. Because on the surface, it appears to be nothing more than an extension of the policy we have followed throughout our history.

But there is a fundamental difference between this argument and the policy we have always pushed. In the past we have had regulation of business by the government—not direction and management of business by the government. What is the difference between the two? It is very simple. Under the one—in the policy we have always followed—the business is run by the people. Under the other, the government would tell us what we must do. Under one system the government is the umpire, enforcing the rules that the people make. Under the other system, the government itself plays the game—the people are mere puppets.

WE LOSE INDEPENDENCE UNDER OTHER SYSTEM

Under the one system we have independence, liberty, freedom. Under the other system we lose our independence. We lose our liberty. We lose our freedom. And we lose all this without obtaining security—that security promised by those urging an ever-increasing accumulation of powers to be wielded by a president of the United States.

To the young voters among your friends and neighbors I ask you to take this message: Tell them the choice before this country, in this campaign is not whether there have been abuses in the economic system that need to be corrected. We know there are such abuses and we propose to do all that is within the constitutional power of government to eliminate them. The issue is not whether the intentions of the present administration are good or bad.

The real issue as we see it is this: The present administration apparently believes there is no future for this country. It has accepted the idea that we have reached our peak—that ahead of us is a large standing army of unemployed; that, in consequence, the government must play a greater and greater part in managing the details of our daily lives instead of confining itself to the expanding field of regulation in the public interest.

The Republican party, on the other hand, utterly rejects this philosophy. It believes America still is on the upgrade, that we can eliminate unemployment, that the government should lighten the rules governing business, but should not attempt to manage business; that, in a word, America will once again be a nation where youth can be confident of its future.

I have an abiding faith in the unselfish purpose of the young voter—in his desire to make his government responsive to the needs of a great nation—in his determination to exercise his vote count for his country.

WOMAN IS NEAR DEATH WITH BULLET IN HEAD

Found slumped in a chair with a bullet wound in her right temple, Mrs. Pete Caronis, 38, of 72 West Peachtree place, was admitted to Grady hospital in a critical condition last night.

Henry Conrad, manager of the apartment house in which Mrs. Caronis lives, said he heard a shot at about 9:30 o'clock. A short time later, a woman came home, came home, finding her in the living room. A single bullet from a .32-caliber pistol had entered her head. The woman was in a right hand, resting on her knees, police said. Her husband said Mrs. Caronis had been despondent because of ill health.

HUNTED FOR 18 DAYS, FUGITIVES SURRENDER

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Sept. 18.—(AP)—An 18-day manhunt shaded with lynch talk ended today when John T. Brite and Coke Brite, brothers, were locked in Folsom prison for safekeeping after their gray-haired mother had arranged their surrender on a triple murder charge.

The mountaineer fugitives surrendered to District Attorney James Davis and a friend, Dr. Earl E. Harris, in the isolated Horse Creek district while possumen still hunted them.

The Brites are charged with killing Deputy Sheriff Martin Lange, Communist Joe Clark and Captain Fred Seaborn, a maritime pilot, in a battle August 30 growing out of the officers' attempt to arrest the brothers.

THREE YOUTHS INJURED WHEN AUTO HITS POLE

Three youths were injured when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a telephone pole on Hollywood road, near Spring street, Carey Park, at about 10 o'clock last night.

They were taken to Grady hospital, where they were listed as Julian Bell, 16, driver of Hills Mark, who suffered cuts on the face; John Riley, 18, of South Grand avenue, who suffered a fractured right leg, and Lonnie Argo, 17, of Smyrna, who also was cut and bruised.

Cause of the crash was not learned.

HARVARD AWARDS MADE.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Harvard University as part of its tercentenary observance, awarded honorary degrees today to 62 of the world's most distinguished scholars including the Nobel prize winners. The awards were divided as follows: Doctor of science 34, doctor of letters 23, doctor of divinity 2, doctor of laws 2 and doctor of music 1.

COMMITTEE APPROVES CITY PAY CUT RETURN

member of the budget commission; Councilman J. Allen Couch and Councilman Raleigh Drennon voted for the salary restoration.

Milam was supported by Councilman M. C. (Mac) Bolen and John A. While in opposing the measure. "We recommend allocation of all this new revenue to keep various city departments performing public service for the remainder of the year," Milam said. "If we continue to pile up a deficit, the credit of the municipality will be definitely imperiled. We must issue scrip to meet November and December payrolls, and if we can not have it absorbed, employees will suffer more than they would by not having this reinstatement of salary."

"If we do this foolish thing, we will lose the confidence of banks. You men wouldn't run your own business like this. We must administer this money wisely or unwise, economically or uneconomically. I ask you to give this matter your honest consideration."

Battle in Prospect. Gilliam, Myrie and Wilson insisted that the reinstatement be voted, and a councilmanic battle looms Monday in council.

A fund of $34,000 of the $60,000 which remained after the diversion had been ordered was referred again to Milam and B. Graham West, city comptroller, to attempt to redistribute to various departments in order to keep them operating.

Market Outlook

By MAX BUCKINGHAM.
(Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.)
NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(UP)—Prices advanced from one to more than three points on the New York Stock Exchange today and trading was more active. Bonds, particularly those of domestic corporations, improved.
The traders attributed the improvement to a "defensive spirit" developed among a few traders; continued favorable trade statistics; large volume of new issues; and a decline in tax on undistributed income and growing strength of the investment reserve behind all security operations. The improvement today plus the mild rally Thursday did not, however, bring complete assurance the market had started forward. Many traders felt the advances were purely technical.
Meanwhile trade statistics continued to make favorable reading. Inclusive of the week ending September 12—including the Labor Day holiday—were 699,859 or 64,821 under the preceding six-day week. The total, however, was 73 cars better than the corresponding week of 1935 which was a six-day business week. The corresponding week of 1934 was 73 cars better than the corresponding week of 1935 which was a six-day business week. The corresponding week of 1934 was 73 cars better than the corresponding week of 1935 which was a six-day business week.
The principal beneficiaries included Newmont Mining, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, and the American Bunker Hill & Sullivan, Gulf Oil and Humble Oil which closed 1 to 2 points higher.
Among fractional gainers were Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, Northern States Power "A," Wayne Pump, Lynch Corporation and Long Island Lighting.
Sales of 367,000 shares compared with 236,000 the day before.

KEY DEMANDS RIVAL OUTLINE TAX POLICY

Mayor Favors Restoration of Pay Cuts as Revenues Make It Possible.

As friends of Mayor Key last night held a community gathering at 1080 Curran street in behalf of his candidacy for re-nomination, the mayor issued a statement in which he asserted there is a public demand for William B. Hartsfield, his opponent, to outline his policy on tax reduction and reform in the police department.

The statement also set out that Key favors a restoration of the salaries of municipal employees and a reduction of the city deficit at such time as the reduced relief burden and increased revenue from better business conditions bring additional money to the municipality.

At the same time, A. L. Henson, state veterans' service officer, released for publication a report he had made last night on the police department, praising Key's action of service men "found to be suffering from mental disturbances." He also stated that Key pardoned 37 incarcerated veterans in order that they could obtain their bonuses.

Text of Key's statement follows: "Mr. Hartsfield is straddling the fence. The people know my stand on the important questions and are entitled to know where Mr. Hartsfield stands. They are wondering why he does not lead the city."

"I favor innocent Sunday amusements. I favor 15 per cent valuation on intangibles."

"I favor raises in employees' salaries and reductions in the deficit as soon as the reduced relief burden and the increased revenue from better business conditions bring the city money."

"I favor putting the police department in the hands of a citizens' committee if the present committee on public safety does not function efficiently."

"Why is Mr. Hartsfield afraid to come out frankly with his stand on these questions?"

ATLANTA THEATER NEWS

New Feature at Fox Is Drama of China

An exciting melodrama of seething China, "The General Died at Dawn," opened a week's engagement yesterday at the Fox theater.

Starring Gary Cooper and Madeline Carroll, the supporting cast includes Dudley Digges, William Frawley, Porter Hall, J. M. Kerrigan and Akim Tamiroff.

While Cooper's work is up to his usual standard, and Miss Carroll's performance adds stature to her recent screen appearances, it is Akim Tamiroff, playing the role of the sinister General Chang, who gives the film its dominating acting note.

As a cruel and ambitious warlord, Tamiroff, looking the part to spine-chilling perfection, achieves a historic triumph.

Lewis Milestone's direction, and the photography, especially in early sequences, add much to the film's worth. The screen play was penned by Clifford Odets, young American playwright.

As for the story, it gets off to a fast-moving start, and never slackens tempo. It tells of Cooper's struggles to aid the masses of Chinese who are being ruined by the evil General Chang.

Complications begin almost from the start when he is tricked by Miss Carroll, whose father is a secret agent. The action from this point revolves principally around the loss of a great amount of money, entrusted to Cooper for delivery to Chang.

The loss of the money brings about the play's most tense moments. Chang, believing both Cooper and the girl know where the money is hidden, plans to torture them to death. An accidental drunken brawl in which Chang is stabbed brings about their ultimate deliverance.

All in all, it is good, exciting film fare. Short subjects complete a worthwhile bill.

"They Met in a Taxi" Is Rialto's New Film

Good fun-liners and clever comedy acting makes the new picture at Rialto Roy Cohen's "They Met in a Taxi," now playing at the Rialto theater, one of the season's better light shows.

The leading roles are played by those veterans of wisecracking, Lionel Stander and Chester Morris, and pretty little Fay Wray, who supplies the beauty and love interest.

The picture opens with Morris and Stander acting the roles of taxi drivers in New York city. Morris picks up a regular fare, Raymond Walburn, who writes a light-lively society column gossip for one of the larger papers. He drives his fare to a hotel where, as soon as the society editor gets out, a girl—Miss Wray—jumps in and orders the driver to "just drive fast."

She poses as the daughter of a rich man. The driver finally succumbs to her appeals for aid and helps the "rich young lady" hide from the man she does not want to marry.

The next day, Morris finds out the girl he is harboring is not an heiress but instead is out with the police. He threatens to turn her in, but with typical feminine charm she manages to convince him that she does not steal the necklace but had been framed.

The two taxi drivers, the newspaperman, and the pretty girl get their heads together, pin the crime on a rich young man-about-town, and all ends happily with wisecracks—in a gentleman's apartment.

In the supporting cast are Henry Morrison, Kenneth Hurlan and Ann Merrill.

NYA CONFERENCE

Educators Will Discuss Aid for Students.

Presidents and officials of Georgia colleges will gather at 10 o'clock this morning at the Chamber of Commerce building for a conference with D. B. Lasseter, state director of the National Youth Administration, to discuss aid to college students during the fall school term.

Mr. Lasseter announced recently that $44,018 will in a month be available through the NYA program, and that 3,650 Georgia students will be aided this year.

Officials of 53 state institutions have been invited to the conference. Representative students also have been asked to aid in discussing the program.

TOCOSA YOURS GIVEN LIFE-TERM SENTENCES

Scott and Smith Convicted in Slaying of Mrs. Herring.

TOCOSA, Ga., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Two Tocoosa boys heard a superior court judge sentence them to life imprisonment today for the robbery-slaying of Mrs. Joseph Herring, wife of a retired army officer.

Sanford Scott and Cecil Smith, the defendants, stood quietly as Superior Judge Ben P. Gaillard pronounced sentence.

Scott maintained the calm he displayed throughout the trial. He was accompanied by his parents. He is small for his age.

Throughout the trial he insisted he had nothing to do with the beating of Mrs. Herring. He said he was never nearer the house than the highway, where, he said, he kept watch for Scott.

Major Herring was present at the trial only long enough to testify. He broke down when the state introduced in evidence a matted and trowel it contained had been used to beat Mrs. Herring.

A jury found the boys guilty late yesterday and recommended mercy. Under Georgia law, this carries a penalty of life imprisonment.

ATLANTA LEGION GROUP TO ATTEND CONVENTION

250 Local Members Will Be Joined by Georgia, Florida Delegations.

Approximately 250 Atlanta Legionnaires to be joined by several hundred others from parts of Georgia and from Florida will leave here today by motorcade and train for the national convention of the American Legion at Cleveland.

Officials of Atlanta Post No. 1 said last night that the candidacy of Quimby Melton, Griffin editor, as national commander of the Legion, has been endorsed by practically every southern district.

The first departure of Legionnaires will take place at 9 o'clock this morning, when a motorcade composed of two cars and the three deputy bugle corps of Atlanta and Winter Haven, Fla., will leave Legion headquarters at Auburn avenue and Pryor street.

Miami's former world champion drum and bugle corps will arrive at 6:45 o'clock (Atlanta time) this afternoon, parading from the Terminal to the Union station, where they will take a special train to Cleveland.

The "Quimby Melton Special" will leave the Terminal station at 7 o'clock (Atlanta time) and will be followed by Pullman cars will be provided delegates and all employees on the train will be former service men, officials said.

FARMER IS KILLED NEAR GAINESVILLE

Acquaintance Is Held in Slaying of Asbury McDonald.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Asbury McDonald, 40-year-old farmer, was shot to death tonight as he passed the home of an acquaintance two miles north of Gainesville.

Deputy Sheriffs Lee Land and J. C. Smith said they had taken the acquaintance, listed as Robert Allen, 40, into custody on a warrant sworn out by McDonald's brother, C. M. Johnnie, pending an investigation of the case.

The officers said McDonald was shot through the head with a pistol as he fled a few hours later at a hospital here.

GLYNN ZONING RULED UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Glynn county's zoning act of 1927 was held unconstitutional yesterday by the Georgia supreme court.

The case reached the high court when the commissioner of roads and revenue of Glynn county appealed a refusal of injunction to restrain Mrs. C. V. Cate from erecting a gasoline filling station on St. Simon's island.

The supreme court ruled that the zoning act did not come within the provisions of a constitutional amendment adopted in 1920 granting zoning powers to cities of 25,000 population and over, based on the 1920 federal census.

Miss Clark Weds Paul Seydel At Impressive Episcopal Rites

MR. AND MRS. PAUL VASSAR SEYDEL.

The marriage of Miss Helen Lee Clark, daughter of Colonel J. A. Clark, U. S. A., and Paul Vassar Seydel was solemnized at an impressive service last evening at 8 o'clock at the Pro-Cathedral of St. Philip before an assemblage of army and civilian society. Dean Raimundo de Ovies performed the rites which were preceded by a program of music rendered by the organist, Arthur Davis.

Palms and foliage plants were banded at the back of the altar and provided a background for the flower baskets of white gladioli and dahlias that were arranged at graceful intervals. Between the floral baskets were seven branches in which gladioli gleamed white, tapering. Massive white dahlias were arranged in the gold vases adorning the altar before which the bride and groom stood. The bride wore a gown of white tulle and the groom wore a tuxedo. The bride's hair was styled in a bun and she wore a long veil. The groom's hair was combed back and he wore a bow tie. The ceremony was attended by a large number of guests, including family and friends. The reception followed the ceremony, with refreshments served in the church hall. The bride and groom were the center of attention, surrounded by their guests. The evening was a memorable one for all who attended.

Reception Follows.

Colonel and Mrs. Clark entertained at a reception after the ceremony at their home on St. Augustine place, the guests being limited to members of the families, wedding attendants and out-of-town guests. They were assisted in receiving by the bride and groom and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Seydel, the groom's parents.

Mrs. Clark was attired in a char-trouse-colored chiffon velvet and her hair was styled in a bun. The groom wore a tuxedo and a white bow tie. The reception was a formal affair, with guests seated at round tables. The bride and groom were the center of attention, surrounded by their guests. The evening was a memorable one for all who attended.

An arrangement of cut flowers, with the shades of yellow and lavender predominating, graced the mantels, tables and bookcases in the rooms where the guests assembled. Palms and foliage plants were group in the corners of the rooms.

Mrs. Seydel and her bride left in the late afternoon for a motor trip to New England. They will return in early October and make their home in an apartment until the completion of the new home on Spring Lake park, near Northside drive. For traveling, the bride donned a smart navy blue wool suit with which she wore a dark blue lace blouse and a navy blue fabric hat in her style. A single gardenia graced the lapel of her coat.

The bride was accompanied to the altar by her father, Colonel Clark, by whom she was given in marriage. John Seydel acted as his best man.

Cubs Take Second Place in National, Beating Cards, 3-0

Lonnie Warneke Holds St. Louis To Three Blows

Chicago Shells Parmelee and Heusser in Fifth Frame.

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Lonnie Warneke kept alive the Chicago Cubs' almost dead hopes of overthrowing the New York Giants in the National League today by choking off the St. Louis Cardinals with three hits for a 3-0 shutout triumph.

The victory, the Cubs' sixth over the Cardinals in 17 starts this season, hoisted them back into second place, a halfgame ahead of the Gas-house Gang—but five full games behind the virtually "in" Giants who were idle today.

Warneke, who scored shutouts over the Giants in his last two starts against the league leaders, was a great pitcher as he racked up his 15th decision of the campaign. And the Cubs, after waiting early scoring opportunities, became infected with the spirit of the thing in the fifth inning long enough to provide the lean Arkansas with his three-run margin.

FANS EIGHT. He struck out eight men, seven of them in the first four innings, and did not give up a hit until Art Garibaldi, rookie second baseman, smashed out a single in the fourth with one out. Warneke put a stop to that by striking out Pepper Martin and Joe Medwick, the latter for the second time. With two gone in the fifth, Don Cutler, another Gas-house Gang recruit infielder, drilled a triple to center, but died there when St. Louis Hack threw out Bruce Ogrodowski. The last hit, a single to left field, was made by Garibaldi at the start of the ninth, but Martin, Medwick and Johnny Mize went out in order to give Warneke his shutout.

After the fading league champions had clipped Leroy Parmelee, the Cardinals starter, for five hits in the second and third innings, without managing to score, they went on a production basis in the fifth. Warneke popped out to Ogrodowski to start the inning, but Augie Galan lashed a single to right. He scored on Phil Cavarretta's long double to right center.

LOSERS CONTROL. Parmelee lost his control at that point and before Ed Heusser could be rushed in walked Billy Herman and Frank Demaree, and pitched two wide ones to Hack. Heusser remained long enough to get Hack on a fly to center, on which Cavarretta scored, but he was unable to start the inning, and turn loose a wild pitch that moved Demaree to third and Hartnett to second.

Henry (Cotton) Phippen struck out Billy Jurges to end the uprising, and worked the next two innings with a yield of only one hit. He gave away for Phippen-Batsman Jim Collins in the eighth and George Earnshaw finished. Warneke's most troublesome moment came in the eighth when, with

Jackets, Bulldogs To Open Up Today

First Game Next Friday, So Long Scrimmage Faces Tech.

By Ralph McGill.

Those Georgia Techs took it easy yesterday afternoon. But this afternoon they will take it very hard.

Mr. William Alexander will stage a long and arduous scrimmage this afternoon, the most thorough of the present training season.

His first game is less than one week away, it being scheduled for next Friday night at Grant field with Presbyterian.

While the Blue Stocking opponents are playing Clemson this afternoon at Clemson, Mr. Alexander will put on a scrimmage which will be just as eye-filling and just as testing as a game.

NOT A GAME. It will not be a game, being subject to stops for explanations, condemnations, exhortations and rebukes. But it will be as exciting. And as rigorous.

Yesterday the boys were without their pads. They went through a touch scrimmage, which is just what it implies. The man is considered tackled when touched, or tagged. Yet they do not like for it to be called tag football.

It is splendid training, especially on pass defense and execution. This was followed by practice at kicking off, and in returning a kick-off. Next week will find the Jackets in more of the same drills and also in scrimmages against the Presbyterian plays.

THARPE SCOUTS. Scout Mack Tharpe, the old gumshoe artist, will chug up to Clemson today to put the eye on Presbyterian specifically and on Clemson incidentally. Presbyterian is to be met under lights Friday night. Clemson is a later foe, having replaced North Carolina on the Tech schedule.

He will bring back the head-lights of the Presbyterian for the Jackets to digest next week before the game.

LUCKY, TOO. "We have made satisfactory progress," said Coach W. A. Alexander yesterday. "We have been lucky about injuries and that is something. We have a lot to learn, and are not nearly as good as some of our friends think we are. In other words, there is room for improvement."

The Jackets seem to be in great spirits and are anticipating the first game with a great deal of pleasure. They are eager, it seems, to have at this schedule of games. And especially at Kentucky.

Henry (Cotton) Phippen struck out Billy Jurges to end the uprising, and worked the next two innings with a yield of only one hit. He gave away for Phippen-Batsman Jim Collins in the eighth and George Earnshaw finished. Warneke's most troublesome moment came in the eighth when, with two out, Hack threw the ball into the Cardinal dugout trying to get Ogrodowski who went to second. Jim Collins walked but Hack made a nice play on Terry Moore's sharp hopper for the third out.

DETROIT BEATS INDIANS BEHIND TOMMY BRIDGES

Little Right-hander Gives Tribe 4 Hits; Browns Beat White Sox.

By Felton Gordon.

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 18.—Georgia's gridders took it relatively easy today bidding time for the intra-squad "game" to be played Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Neither Pete Tinsley, Paul Causey nor Don Leeborn will be ready for the scrimmage. Leeborn and Tinsley were in uniform but for picture taking purposes only. Clayton Wilhite, tackle, was a regular kick-off man, and action.

The schedule today included work on kick-offs, returns, placement kicks, signal running and other light chores. A regular kick-off will be used Saturday within the "game," which will continue for four ten-minute quarters.

As the squad prepares to wind up its third week of practice, Coach Mehre was still undecided as to the starting line-up for the Mercer game. It is not fair to say that Mehre was good at left tackle, and Harman and Hall at guards, if they are in trim.

But as far as the other eight positions, Mehre was still undecided. There are the ends, centers, backs and tackle posts to be settled. I may gain a better idea from play Saturday, however.

Coaches Weems Baskin and Sam McAllister left this afternoon to scout the Mercer-South Georgia Teachers' game, under the floodlights tonight at Macon. Coach Mehre was back after having made a talk at the mid-Georgia city Thursday night.

Two scrimmages are slated next week. A letup is slated due to the heat. No night drills are scheduled, however, until a week before the L. S. U. game on October 10.

Next week's scrimmages will probably be held on Tuesday and Thursday. Coaches will take every precaution against possible injuries. Play on the crowded field now will be given time to recuperate. It is feared, however, that this may slow them up considerably.

In spirit and physical condition the squad is far ahead of schedule. More work remains before the boys will have mastered the plays, timing and the tedious fundamentals. More emphasis will be put on the kicking drill after Monday, when the two-day practice schedule will be curtailed by school's opening. Secret sessions begin Monday.

The Jackets seem to be in great spirits and are anticipating the first game with a great deal of pleasure. They are eager, it seems, to have at this schedule of games. And especially at Kentucky.

Kirby's 'Press' Band Is Ripped by Wind

By Dorothy Kirby.

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 18.—It was a damp bad day today. A gale was blowing the whole time during the matches and it was raining just hard enough to drench you when you stuck your head out. It was some day for golf, but the show must go on. When the matches started at 9:30 this morning the wind was blowing awfully hard, but this afternoon when they started out it was terrible. However, Goodman and Fischer played well despite the weather.

A good example of how hard the wind was blowing was this morning when Goodman hit an iron shot to the green it looked as though he aimed it far over to the left because there was a crosswind. But when the ball wound up it was over in the right hand trap. There was a good gallery following the matches in spite of the weather. I took an umbrella today but I was afraid to open it because the wind had just as soon as not pick you right up even though I do weigh a hundred and twenty-six pounds.

I had an arm band on my arm this morning with the word press on it, and the wind tore it to shreds. No fooling. I would hate to have to play golf in this kind of weather. I have been so impressed by the weather that I find that I have not mentioned anything about the matches.

Goodman and Fischer had a fine match this morning. They took turns in going one up and one down until they finally compromised. Goodman rather had the upper hand in his match, for at 18 he turned Voigt squared. The water had settled so badly on the greens that the players had to chip over the water.

I guess that I will just have to admit defeat because my pick, Johnny Goodman, was beaten today by Fischer on the 17th by 2 and 1. It was a good match even though I did lose. McLean went on to win easily over Voigt by 8 and 7. After both of the matches had finished the crowd decided to postpone the final until Sunday on account of the weather. With Fischer and McLean in the finals it will be a good climax to the tournament.

Warren, winner of Georgia softball championship, and quarter-finalists in the national softball tournament in Chicago, will close their season at 8 o'clock tonight with the California state champions as opponents.

The California team, one of the Chicago favorites, was eliminated in the semi-final round in one of the close games of the closing day.

The game was arranged Tuesday before the Warren team left Chicago and is one among 20 the visitors will play en route home.

Manager R. W. McArthur, of the Warren team, was undecided last night as to which player would pitch tonight. He has Sam Elliott, who gave up one hit in two games, struck out 36 batters and won two games; Johnny Allen and Sonny Byrge to shoot at the visitors in tonight's game.

The California team is the best on the west coast.

KENTUCKY OPENS WITH MARYVILLE THIS AFTERNOON

Ole Miss Tackles Union; Duke and Davidson in Night Game.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Re-serving grand opening ceremonies for next week, college football gets away to a faltering start tomorrow with most of the action centering in Dixie.

Only Kentucky and Mississippi of the Southeastern conference will swing into action, the former playing Maryville as usual in its opening game and Mississippi clashing with Union (Tenn.) University. The enlarged Southern conference, however, will be busy with Duke beginning defense of its conference title against the newly admitted Davidson outfit in a night game at Greensboro. North Carolina State will play Elon, with other contests pitting South Carolina against Erskine College against Presbyterian, Virginia Military against Wake Forest and Virginia Tech against Roanoke.

In the east, West Virginia's Mountaineers open against Wabash; Rice opens against Texas A&M and Industries.

Otherwise tomorrow's program is confined to the smaller colleges and only a few of them will make so early a start in a campaign that won't end until December.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS. WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—Cotton experts of the Department of Agriculture do not agree with Governor Talmadge who, in an article in the past week's issue of the Statesman, advised Georgia cotton farmers that money paid out by them as a penalty for exceeding cotton allotments under the original Bankhead cotton control act can be collected from the government at this time. Crackers To Make Attractive Offer for Marshall Mauldin

FORMER SMOKIE DECLARED FREE BY JUDGE LANDIS

Atlanta Finished Third Among Southern League Teams With .377 Mark.

By Melvin Pazol.

Officials of the Atlanta Baseball Club stated last night that they were ready to make an attractive offer to Marshall Mauldin, Atlanta boy who finished the season batting .377 for the Smokies, following announcement Friday from Knoxville and Chicago that the youngster who finished third among Southern league batters had been declared a free agent by Judge Kenesaw Landis.

Mauldin was out of the city last night, and the Cracker management was unable to contact him.

As a free agent, the former Smokie centerfielder is free to contract to sell his services to whomever he pleases, thus obtaining a sizeable amount of money for himself, in addition to his salary as a ball player.

No satisfactory reason was given for the act declaring Mauldin a free agent, Harry Grabner, vice president and secretary of the White Sox, last night stated that Mauldin is now a free agent, just as he was when the Sox got him.

Edgar Allen, secretary of the Knoxville baseball club stated last night that he was told by Landis that the White Sox tried to recall Mauldin at the end of the season, but that Mauldin had "some sort of a claim against the White Sox" which he filed with Landis. Landis thereupon refused to approve Marshall's recall by the Sox, and instead made him a free agent. Allen professed ignorance of the exact nature of the claim.

SMITHIES BEATEN BY SAVANNAH, 13-6

SAVANNAH, Ga., Sept. 18.—Savannah High warded off a desperate final quarter surge tonight to defeat Tech High, 13 to 6, before a crowd of 4,000. "Sonny" Bragg, all-G. I. A. A. back last season, put Savannah in the lead in the second quarter when he raced 22 yards for a touchdown, after the ball was placed in scoring position by a 26-yard pass.

The Blue Jackets scored again on a pass from Bragg to Verritt from the 18-yard line over the goal. Four plays later the Smithies scored when Ellis passed to Childreth, who raced 54 yards down the sidelines for a touchdown.

The two teams were evenly matched, both scoring seven first downs, Tech High outgained Savannah from scrimmage, 255 to 174 yards.

Presbyterian Ready For Clemson Today

CLINTON, S. C., Sept. 18.—This afternoon the Presbyterian College Blue Hose took a light workout and finished preparation for their conflict with the Clemson Tigers tomorrow. Tonight student enthusiasm reached a new high as mass pep meetings were held and bonfires blazed over the campus of the blue-stockinged squad.

The Hose team is not going to Tiger town tomorrow expecting to capture a football game, but they are entering the contest with high hopes and a determination to match the Tigers' drive for drive and punt for punt and hope that the breaks will favor their fast, deceptive play.

It seems fairly certain that the Blue Hose backfield tomorrow will be unequalled in the state for speed. J. R. Jacobs will be at fullback smashing lines, punting with unusual skill, passing accurately. Calling the signals that are calculated to befuddle the Bengals will be triple-threat Quarterback Bill Thompson. Smashing the line in his first effort of the season for the all-state crown will be halfback ace, Coon Weldon. Blocking and running hard will be the only sophomore back in the opening lineup, June Moore.

Baby Dennard, speedy flash and elusive broken field runner, DeLeon Reynolds, clever halfback, and Bill Deazer, broken field runner par excellence, will be covering over the Bengal greensward often during the 60 minutes of conflict as Johnson substitutes them often.

Columbus Releases Oliver to Albany

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Columbus American association baseball club released Outfielder Ernest Oliver to the Albany, Ga., club today. Oliver, whose home is in Oakland, Cal., will report to the Sally loop team next spring.

The Red Birds acquired Oliver June 10 this year from the Columbus, Ga., team. He spent the remainder of the season on option at Pine Bluff, Ark., and Jacksonville, Texas.

President Don Beach, of the association club, also announced the purchase of Second Baseman James V. Grudzis from the Columbus, Ga., team.

M'PHAIL RESIGNS, RICKEY SEEKING CONTROL OF REDS

Report Says Branch Will Resign From Cards for New Post.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Ohio State Journal will say tomorrow that Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the St. Louis Cardinal baseball system, and Merrill C. Russell, of Delaware, Ohio, a director of the Columbus Red Birds, will purchase controlling interest in the Cincinnati National league ball club "within the near future."

The Journal, quoting what it said were reliable sources, cited the resignation of Larry McPhail as general manager of the Cincinnati Reds late today as an indication that the transaction would be completed within a short time.

It said negotiations between Powell Croley Jr., president of the Reds, and Rickey and Russell had been in progress for several months.

Rickey would resign from the Cardinal organization upon taking over the Reds, it said.

Red Director Denies Reports.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Thomas M. Conroy, banker, and director of the Cincinnati Reds Baseball Club, denied reports tonight of negotiations that would lead to sale of controlling interest in the club, to Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Powell Croley Jr., president of the Reds, was out of the city.

"Although I haven't the authority," commented Conroy, "I'll say this: That I don't think anyone could buy Mr. Croley's interest. He's a rabid ball fan, and I know of nothing that would lead him to dispose of the club. And further, I don't know of any negotiations either pending or thought of, in that direction."

Of the resignation of Larry S. McPhail as Reds' general manager, announced today, Conroy asserted that "not even MacPhail knows who his successor is to be."

Crackers

The Pelicans Sunday. The way things are going, however, it looks like the champion Crackers, who led in the regular season from start to finish, are on the way out in the play-off.

CALL ON DRAKE.

The odds are very much against us overcoming the lead. For the Pelis are loaded for bear. They'll use Lou Drake, a rookie who has beaten the Crackers four times already this season.

Jonas Butzman gave the Crackers only six hits tonight. He was very steady in what few pinches existed. The Crackers had never lost a play-off game until New Orleans socked 'em, 20 to 8, in Atlanta. They lost their second straight tonight and only stern measures can rally the forces, which are practically in a state of rout.

Moore did not indicate after the game he would take any action against Hamel. He passed it off as an incident that might happen to anybody in the heat of battle.

WASTE CHANCE.

The Crackers wasted a scoring opportunity in the first inning. Peck Hamel took up some time arguing with Umpire Bond about a second called strike and then blasted a double to center. Mailho bounced out, Smith to McCormick, with Hamel advancing to third. But with Peck waiting at the church, or words to that effect, when Hooks popped to Smith and Lipscomb grounded out, Smith to McCormick.

Just to clear up a point that may seem confusing, Mr. Smith plays second base for the Pelis. He handled all the chances to keep the Crackers from getting Hamel home.

No later than the second inning it was very apparent the Crackers would have to play their heads off, as the saying goes, to beat the Pelis. Irwin made a beautiful play to rob Hill of an infield hit. Chatham singled. He tried to steal second and there was a perfect peg from Helf to Irwin, cutting Chatham down.

On the other hand, a great throw by Mailho reduced a Pelis threat in the last half of the second to a mere nothing.

DURHAM SINGLES.

The Crackers were not to be denied in the third. After Browne fanned, Durham started it off with a single to center. Hamel cracked his second double. It went into the crowd in right, holding Durham to third. Mailho hit a fly to Gleeson, in right. It wasn't a very long fly, but Durham tagged up after the catch and breezed for home. He made a great slide to elude Helf as he made a desperate try to tag him. Hamel expired on second as Hooks popped up for the second time.

The Crackers put up a terrific squawk on a play in the third. Heinrich hit a ball that Brown caught apparently on the edge of the overflow crowd in right. Campbell ruled it a double. The Crackers gathered around Campbell and Hamel, rushing up, shoved the umpire around. The argument raged and then suddenly, Manager Moore and Hamel started at each other. Campbell grabbed Moore while teammates pushed Hamel away.

All this of course, was not very encouraging to Durham. The events that had gone before included a single by Butzman and a walk for Irwin, with one away. Rose singled, scoring Butzman. Then came the double by Heinrich which Browne caught to no avail with a single and Durham left the game. Williams coming in. Connolly flied to right and Gleeson scored after the catch. McCormick tried to take second base and was thrown out. Galvin to Lipscomb.

CRACKERS CRACK.

The Pelis scored three times on two hits and Cracker crudeness. Williams retired in favor of Pinch-Batter Joe Hutcheson in the eighth and Thomas finished the game. The Pelican rout, second straight, put them one up in the series which will be concluded Sunday.

LAKE LAND, Fla., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The fourth annual state press golf tournament will be played here Sunday under sponsorship of the Lakeland Ledger and Star-Telegram and the city recreation department.

Speer Grapples Raines In Big Battle Tonight

Frank Speer, who used to manhandle two and three men at the same time as a Georgia Tech tackle, will attempt to conquer one (but what a man) tonight at the baseball park. The promoter makes his first wrestling appearance on one of his own productions against Dick Raines, regarded by many as the toughest, wildest matman of the day.

Tonight, Speer and Raines will resume where they left off in the dressing room at the ball park several weeks ago. They slugged each other like a pair of enraged elephants, after having previously sent a great crowd into hysterics with their battling in the ring. As referee, Speer gave Raines the only real shellacking he has had here.

Upwards of 5,000 fans are expected to turn out for a match which the public has clamored for these many weeks. Its possibilities are unlimited. Certainly Speer will dish out plenty of punishment to the mighty Texan. He is in shape and ready to shoot the "wooks."

Raines weighs nearly 240 pounds and Speer tips the beams at 230. It is a 90-minute, two-out-of-three-fall match.

EDEN AND FELTS IN PRESS FINALS

C. R. Edens and H. L. Felts entered the finals of the annual newspaper golf tournament with victories Friday on the No. 1 East Lake course in the semi-finals. Edens defeated Roby Robinson, 1 up, and Felts eliminated Bill Hutchinson, 4-3.

The finals will be played Monday afternoon.

In the second flight Kenneth Gregory defeated Ray Walker, 3-1, to win the title. T. J. Smith beat John Smith, 6-4, to win the third flight championship, and Floyd Boggs took the fourth flight crown with a 4-3 victory over R. Dobbs.

Centenary Takes Gridiron Opener

ALEXANDRIA, La., Sept. 18.—(AP)—After holding the powerful Centenary College Gents of Shreveport scoreless during the first half the Louisiana College Wildcats weakened last night and the visitors pushed over three touchdowns to win, 21 to 0. The score exactly duplicated last year's score.

Louisiana College made two goal line stands in the first half to prevent scores.

TARZAN AND THE MAYAN GODDESS No. 72

The warrior chief, well ahead of his comrades, was almost upon Ulu and George, having his machete brandished to stop them. Tarzan determined to stop him, though he knew that would give his friends only a brief respite before the other savages arrived and hacked them to pieces.

From the trees the ape-man dropped down before the furious chief. The Indian was surprised, but not too surprised to dash forward and aim a slashing blow at the tree-man. Tarzan leaped nimbly aside, then launched himself upon his foe and quickly disarmed him.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Then an inspiration came to Tarzan. His right arm encircled the chief, and he sprang upward with his burden. The warriors halted in amazement at this incredibly skyward flight of their chief. George shouted at them tauntingly: "Yah! What do you think of that?"

Now Tarzan called down to Tohus, his interpreter. "Tell them if they do not let us all go in peace, I will kill their chief." The ape-man was peace, by no means sure his ultimatum would be accepted, for he knew that the warriors were aroused to an unreasoning bloodlust.

Detective Triumphs

By GEORGE BARTON.

Many years ago, when the United States mint in Philadelphia was located on Chestnut street, near Broad, the officials were started to find a shortage of more than $100,000 in gold. They were convinced that it was an "inside job" and the matter was considered so serious that Andrew L. Drummond, then chief of the Government Secret Service, undertook a personal investigation.

In the belief that he was not known in the Quaker City, he had himself enrolled as an "extra" in the mint and made it his business to become acquainted with the employees of the money factory. It was not long before he made an important discovery. The case in which three bars of gold were stored in the old mint building was very antiquated. It was locked and sealed, of course, but the gold bars could be seen through the open grating, and by constant poking it was possible to dislodge them. Moreover, removing the wooden base near the floor a skillful worker could slip them out.

That was all right as far as it went, but it did not explain how the precious metal was carried out of the mint building. No one there was permitted to go out with a package without having it examined.

Drummond managed to get into the confidence of the workers in the mint. One was Harry Corcoran, an old and trusted employee; the second was John Green and the third was Peter Hufnagle. He was so perturbed that one of the three was the culprit. All of them had carried packages out at one time or another.

Corcoran had a small farm in the suburbs of Philadelphia, and every morning he brought in a supply of fruit, vegetables or flowers to his fellow workers. He carried them in a market basket, but when he left at night that basket was regularly inspected, according to the rules of the establishment. Nothing out of the way was ever found.

Of the three Corcoran seemed the least open to suspicion, but nevertheless Drummond kept him under constant surveillance. Indeed he went out to his farm by way of the city and by the simple life led by the venerable man, Corcoran explained to him that he made ends meet by buying old trinkets from pennymen and others and then melting the gold, sold it to the government at a profit.

Finally Drummond had Corcoran detained at night, while he went to his farm and made a thorough search of the
